Chandler McLay has had myriad experiences in education taking her from Maine to California and Idaho to New Zealand. A graduate of Tufts University, she moved on to university teaching, and later completed her masters at the University of Wisconsin, Madison; University of California, Berkley; and Nova University.

She has over 40 years experience in education, spanning pre-school through graduate levels, and adult education. She is an enthusiastic advocate of experiential education in its many forms and has built a full spectrum of programs, facilitating leadership and communication building skills through fun-filled nature-based learning experiences.

Her fields of diversity include:

- director, two private schools
- education director, spearheading two therapeutic schools to accreditation
- director of education, wildlife preserve and conservation center
- guide leader, women's wilderness programs
- facilitator/ trainer, in the field and in family facilitation - wilderness programs for adolescents and young adults

Currently, Chandler focuses on coaching life skills, consulting, workshops, facilitating staff training, and leading wilderness trips for adult women.

With a highly evolved talent for assisting people of all ages to speak clearly and communicate their feelings in a direct and caring way, her work is valuable to individuals and organizations, whether in the office, family, team, or individual setting. Even where there has been conflict, fear or divisiveness, Chandler can facilitate the development of sincere, confident communication skills that bring forth the respect and dignity that is inherent in healthy relationships.

What others say:

"Chandler's enthusiasm is contagious! She believes in the brilliance of the human spirit and brings out the best, even that which I have yet to recognize in myself! She works you hard and gets results! And those results have been the basis for my continued success in reaching my own goals which I have set for myself." mcj, TX

"It has been my privilege to work with Chandler for the past 18 years. I have seen her work with countless families, bringing them back into love and harmony; I have seen her ingenuity in working with women in the wilderness and in teambuilding for businesses; and I have seen her work miracles with addicts/alcoholics and their families. She is incredibly talented, insightful and willing to go where many people fear to go in helping others overcome fear and pain, whatever the source." kw, UT

"Chandler's heart is open to the beauty that resonates in each of us. She helped my team "see through" our organizational patterns in such a way it was easy and delightful. It could have been a meeting fraught with personal disasters yet she made it fun. She brought us together within 15 minutes of our gathering, whereas there had been underlying tension beforehand." kj, TX

"I have seen firsthand how profoundly Chandler can touch the lives of others -- first, when my son was in crisis and, later, when I was drawn to join her wilderness treks for women. Her remarkable insights into human nature and Mother Nature, and her ability to marry the two, make her a special guide for any individual or team with the courage to grow. Run, don't walk, if you have the chance to spend time with Chandler. It will change your life." dg, TN
